Indian Health Service

The Indian Health Service (IHS) is an agency within the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services and is responsible for providing federal health services to American Indians and Alaska Natives. The provision of health services to members of federally recognized tribes grew out of the special government to government relationship between the federal government and Indian tribes. This relationship, established in 1787, is based on Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution, and has been given form and substance by numerous treaties, laws, Supreme Court decisions, and Executive Orders.

The IHS is the principal federal health care provider and health advocate for Indian people, and its goal is to assure that comprehensive, culturally acceptable personal and public health services are available and accessible to American Indian and Alaska Native people. The IHS currently provides health services to approximately 1.5 million American Indians and Alaska Natives who belong to more than 550 federally recognized tribes in 35 states.

National Showcase

Patient Benefits' Coordination Program

The program includes identifying potentially eligible patients, providing state/federal benefits education to our patients and, if indicated, assisting them in accessing those available programs/alternate resources.

Most importantly, this program has meant increased health care access options to our patients and providers. Our facility Medicaid collections have increased dramatically, resulting in our ability to maintain and/or increase services to our patients!
